Pertinent Paragraphs

We were gonna write a bit about the weather, drawing in those old favorites, unusual, Florida must've had something to do with it, but think we'll skip it. Where can you find better?

Who was it said it was impossible to get something for nothing? Lookit the theatre adv. this issue!

Credit Andy Benson with this one: "If you're looking for a helping hand, look at the end of your own arm first!"

Heard a rumor. Odd. This one dealt with something that we've had past experience with. "Somebody said" business district of our town should have mail delivered to the door daily, inasmuch as the p. o. has carrier service and is a second class post office. Why, we don't know. The exercise is good — and with a brand new pretty post office building going up it'll be a real pleasure — but the rumor was correct. Residences and business places of Lemon Grove are entitled to two mail deliveries each day — unless something has changed real recently. All that is necessary to secure same is to petition the post office department in Washington, D. C. If a majority want it — it'll come.

That last sentence fascinates us. Therein lies the secret of the greatest heritage we know of. "If the majority want it —" Of course, this must necessarily include, sometimes "bad enough." Think it over.

Got your license under control yet? If not and you fail to do so by February 4, have a care! The state department of motor vehicles reports that the penalty to automobile owners for car taxes not paid before the deadline is 100 percent of the registration fee and 50 percent of the license fee. Ouch!

CONSIDERING JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL HERE

The Lemon Grove Elementary School Board met Tuesday evening and dispatched the usual routine business of approving pay rolls and current expenditures.

Sam Hamill, school architect, and Francis Darby, assistant county schools superintendent, were present and discussed the future development of the Lemon Grove school site as recommended by John Branigan of the division of School House Planning.

It was recommended that the board look into the matter of developing an intermediate or junior high school here in the near future, and school superintendent Byron T. Netzley was instructed to look into the matter of applying for State aid for the project.

Several applications for a teaching principal for the new Vista La Mesa school were considered. The applicant will be expected to teach one half day.

Furniture and equipment for the new school building can be delivered promptly, and bids will be opened Wednesday night.

The inspector reported that the bad weather had slowed down construction somewhat, but it is reasonable to expect the building will be completed by March 1.

Bids for the new Monterey Heights school building are being published, and they will be opened March 28, at 8:00 p. m., in the Lemon Grove School. Superintendent Netzley remarked that from the number of contractors looking at the plans, there will be several bids.

The local Irrigation District gave title to the Hillsdale tract to the school district, so that matter is all cleared now.

The school board approved a resolution of the County Supervisors to close Taft and Bakersfield Streets. The school, in turn, deeded a ten foot strip to the County for Canton, Glencoe and Nichals Streets, so that there can be a 60 foot road around the school grounds.

Due to the bad weather, 285 children were absent from school Tuesday, which is 20% of the 1315 enrolled.

Seven children are on the waiting list to enter kindergarten.

It was suggested that next year the school board purchase a pick-up truck for hauling supplies between the three schools, and save drayage expenses, but no action was taken.

The school board expressed its appreciation to Mr. Darby for his advice regarding the junior high project.

ATTENDED FUNERAL

Mr. Walter Collins of Massachusetts Avenue, his sister, Mrs. Chuck Browell of Chula Vista, and two brothers, Mr. Carol Collins and Mr. Ellis Collins, of San Diego, motored to Kingman, Arizona, last week end to attend the funeral of their sister, Mrs. Hugh Hill, who had been ill for the past three months.

Lions Told About Food Lockers and Freezing

A. P. Schnell, owner of American Frozen Food Lockers, and president of the San Diego County Association of Food Locker Men, was speaker of the evening at the regular weekly meeting of the Lions, Thursday at Legion Hall.

In his talk, Mr. Schnell explained the process of freezing and the advantages and disadvantages of food lockers.

He expressed the opinion that renting a locker and using it only occasionally for a half of beef was not profitable, as the customer paid almost as much for his meat as if he bought it at a store.

Keeping a locker full, Mr. Schnell stated, is the way to save money. Berries, fruit, fish, poultry and meat can be stored to keep the locker full and get real benefit from its use.

Locker plants now use a gas known as "freon" which is odorless and fireproof. This gas passes through a condenser which cools it and in turn cools the coils through which it passes. This gas is far superior to the old ammonia method which was formerly used.

Locker plants not only sell food for freezing, but cut, wrap and label meat for its customers, according to Mr. Schnell.

Y's Men Report On Sale of Christmas Trees

Final tabulations have been made and it is now certain that the sale of Christmas trees by the Y's Men's Club has been a success in more ways than one. The first, though not necessarily the most important measure of success was in the form of approximately $240.00 in net profit. This profit was made possible because of donations of time and materiel by Y's Men and others. Had we had to pay for lumber for the shed, workmanship on wiring, carpentry, clerks, rental for lot etc., our profits would have been negligible. We are grateful to all who spent time and efforts in our behalf.

This profit would not have been possible had not many people been willing to buy their tree from us even though a tree of same size and quality was selling nearby at a lower price.

This profit also would not have been possible had not the children and young people of this commuity cooperated with us in such a splendid manner, and herein is the greatest success we have had. To be specific, WE COMMEND THE YOUTH AND CHILDREN OF LEMON GROVE because in the two weeks, both day and night, that we left our trees outside and unguarded, not one single tree was stolen or damaged. Those who insist that our youth are the worst in the country should take note.

Two months ago a committee was appointed to investigate the feasibility of building a swimming pool in Lemon Grove. It has been found that a pool, to meet health requirements, would cost in the neighborhood of $30. thousand plus maintenance. Our conclusion, naturally, is that a pool is not feasible so we dedicate our small amount of $240.00 to youth and children's work in Lemon Grove.

We hope that the manner in which we spend this money which we have earned but which at the same time has been given to us by our customers as a trust will be spent in a manner that will solicit and deserve your support and cooperation in the future.

The Y's Men meet in the parlors of the First Congregational Church on the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month for a supper meeting. We invite any young man over 20 years of age who is concerned about the necessity for children's, youth, young adult work or World outlook, to attend.

Y's Men's Christmas Tree Report Committee.

BUSINESS MEN DISCUSS BRDWY, NITE POLICING

The Lemon Grove Business Men's Association held their regular weekly meeting Tuesday at the local Country Club.

The subject of a country constable similar to Vista and other unincorporated communities, was introduced and a committee of three was appointed to investigate the possibility of an appointee from the sheriff's office to assist Willard Rigley, whose duties carry him beyond the bounds of Lemon Grove. The committee headed by A. J. Christensen includes H. A. Shields and J. A. Van Gilse.

Wages for a new deputy would consist of a $75.00 monthly guarantee by the Sheriff's office and the balance made up by the Lemon Grove merchants. The new deputy, if appointed, would have full police authority and would replace the agency now employed for this purpose.

Broadway, Federal Boulevard and Highway 94 came under discussion and it was resolved that the Business Men's Association go on record in favor of the straightening and widening of this main artery and that letters to this effect be sent to the City Manager of San Diego and the State Highway Commissioner.

A three man committee was appointed to determine what had been accomplished by other civic groups towards this end. The committee included J. McClurken, W. Dobbins and Bob Johnson.

Like the New Year, the Business Men's Association is off to a flying start, and requests the cooperation of all other civic groups as well as individuals towards making this a boom year in the Grove.

Business Men — this is your organization — get behind its efforts 100% and let's be proud of our opportunity to assist in the development of our town.

LET'S DISCUSS IT

by Mrs. Agnes Whitlock

Where are you from? What kind of place is it? What are some of the outstanding things you remember? These are some of the questions I asked of Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Greenlee of 8429 Golden Avenue.

Here is their answer:

"We hail from Cheyenne and Big Horn, Wyoming. The country there is beautiful if you like mountains and forest.

"Cheyenne itself is on a plateau 6,060 feet above sea level. Although Cheyenne is best known for being a 'Frontier Town' in the old days, and the country around it is still wild, more or less, the Cheyenne of today is a very up to date city.

"It was the first city in the United States to be lighted by electricity. It has hundreds of acres of lovely parks, good schools, and a beautiful capitol building. Just one mile south of Cheyenne, you will find the largest Hereford cattle ranch in the United States. (Man oh man, there's a lot of juicy beefsteak on the hoof).

"In July, Cheyenne puts on an annual celebration called, "Frontier Days," a wild west show that is said to be the "Daddy of them all." This is one of the most outstanding things that I remember about Cheyenne, and every man, woman and child participates. City officials, townspeople, including the clerks in all the stores, dress in western attire during the five days of the celebration.

"This show attracts thousands of visitors. In the Rodeo, one of the main attractions is a horse called, "Five Minutes to Midnight," which the cowboys try to ride, but no one has stayed on him as yet.

"Big Horn is near the mountain line, and eight miles east of Sheridan, Wyoming. This vicinity abounds in elk, deer, bear, mountain lions, mountain sheep, etc. in other words a hunter's paradise.

"You meet people from all over the world, here on the big 'Dude Ranches.' On these ranches it is usually the foreman who looks after things in the winter, with the owners coming out only in the summer.

"All the ranches aren't dude ranches, however. One of the largest cattle ranches is the Bar 13. The Montcriffs are known for their sheep. The Island Ranch is noted for its racing horses, and the Olivers raise Polo horses. They have one of the finest Polo fields in that part of the country. They play a team from New Jersey each year.

"But with all of this, that part of the country just doesn't compare with California and Lemon Grove.

"We came here two years ago, to get out of the snow. We think Lemon Grove is the "Best." The climate just can't be beat, besides being able to grow fruit trees in your own yard, (in Wyoming very few fruit trees will grow), one can have flowers in bloom the year around.

"With all the glass and new designs being used in the shops and stores being built here, we are sure, when our town is built up, that it will be one of the most up to date cities in the Southland."

Anyone thinking of moving to Wyoming? You might have a talk with the Greenlees. They'll be glad to tell you all about it.

After reading about the twenty foot snow drifts and blizzard in Wyoming, this past week, the Greenlees are very glad to be out here in "Sunny California." Ah-h yes, good old sunny California, icicles and all.

KNOW YOUR WEATHER

Many industries hire their own weather man. One baking company asks its weather man to predict tomorrow's needs. On a windy or rainy day, a million housewives will stay indoors and thousands of loaves of bread can be a major loss.

La Mesan to be Speaker Before Study Group

Guest speaker at the Lemon Grove Theosophical Study Group meeting to be held Monday at 8:00 P. M. will be Mr. T. T. Clemesha, president of the La Mesa Theosophical lodge. Mr. Clemeshaw has several times previously addressed the Lemon Grove group and his talks are always enthusiastically received.

The meeting will be held in the home of Ruth Schulte, 2862 Cypress Street. The public is invited.

HONORED BIRTHDAY

DINNER GUEST OF FORMER NEIGHBORS

Mr. Thomas Irey, of Santa Maria, was a dinner guest of his former neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Ahrensberg of Washington Street Friday evening. Mr. Irey and his brother are now doing a trucking business between San Pedro and San Diego.

LARGE CROWD AT CORNERSTONE LAYING CEREMONIES

In spite of adverse weather conditions, the Corner Stone Laying ceremony at the Congregational Church had a packed house, with seven visiting ministers and delegations from different churches.

This church was first organized in 1894 and held services in the Lemon Grove School house until 1897, at which time the first church was built at the corner of Olive and Church Streets.

In 1913 the present church building was erected and continual growth has caused the need for the new building, which will be dedicated in approximately two months. On September 8, of 1949, the church will celebrate its 55th anniversary.

A number of interesting things were placed in the box to go back of the cornerstone. There was a program of dedication of the old building, several bulletins made during Dr. Waddell's pastorate, and some during Rev. Apra's present ministry.

Included was a bible used by Dr. Waddell while he served the church, and last, but not least, the "Blister Brigade" or a list of the volunteer workers who labored Saturdays, evenings, and holidays, nailing sheeting, shingles, button board, etc. To date it is estimated about $3500 worth of volunteer labor has been furnished by the men of the church.

After the service the congregation adjourned to the basement dining room to enjoy food and fellowship together.

The great thinker is seldom a disputant. He answers other men's arguments by stating the truth as he sees it.

CAMP FIRE PHRASES ARE SYMBOLIC

In the Camp Fire Girls program names are important because each has a special meaning. The name "Camp Fire Girls" has its symbolic meaning indicating that its program centers around the home. The word "Fire" symbolizes the warmth and friendliness of the hearth, and the out-of-doors experience is implied by the word "Camp."

A Camp Fire group is a group of girls together enjoying the natural world, working on their problems of living and playing together and on their projects of fun and service. The name was not an accident, but was carefully chosen for its significance and meaning, as were all the other parts of the Camp Fire program.

If a group understands why they choose a group name they will be eager to have it stand for the real progress they mean to make, the service they give, the activities they share, and the lives they live together as Camp Fire Girls.

The idea of each member choosing a name and symbol is one feature that makes the program different from others. A Camp Fire Girl can express her individual ideas, goals or ideals by her name and symbol.

The idea of using symbols to express ideas is a very old one. The world is full of practical or decorative signs and symbols. Camp Fire selects their symbols from the American Indian tribes.

The Ot-Yo-Kwa group which meets at 9:30 at their leader's home are combining their symbols into indian head bands of different colored indian beads. They are very lovely when finished and are to be worn at the Camp Fire Ceremonials, or can be worn for belts.

KEPT AT HOME BY SNOW SUNDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Morse and son of Morena Lake, planned a trip to visit his parents Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Morse of Golden Avenue Sunday, but had to forego the pleasure as there was a foot of snow at the lake which rendered the road impassable.

Mrs. Ted Morse's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Todd, made it to Moreno Lake Saturday, but got stuck in the snow on the return trip, and spent the major part of the night getting home.

ENJOYED SNOW SPORTS

Mr. Will Maxted and son Walter Maxted, Fred and Charlie Campbell, Donald Anderson, Jimmie Dunton and Carl Herder enjoyed snow sports at Laguna Sunday.

WEEK END TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Richard O. Hardy and Mr. and Mrs. Leon Palasik made a week end trip through Orange and Los Angeles Counties, and report much visible damage to citrus and avocado groves.

One small lemon planting was in apparently perfect condition, when all about it were frozen stiff. A wind machine had saved the lemon trees.

SPRING VALLEY COUNCIL OFFICERS NOMINATED

The coordinating council of Spring Valley held the regular meeting Tuesday evening January 11, at the Pals and Gals Clubhouse on Troy Road. Mr. A. M. Peters, president, representing the Men's Brotherhood, Spring Vally Community Church, opened the meeting by thanking those who cooperated in making the Christmas party a success. He reported that two-thirds of the excess candy was donated to the Salvation Army and the balance to the S. D. Childrens' Home.

The candy for the Salvation Army was just being delivered by Mr. Peters when the Army's truck was about to leave with candy for the Children's hospital but with far less candy than was needed. Mr. Peters' arrival was timed just right to make the Salvation Army and the children very grateful for what might otherwise have been a meager treat.

A shortage of $13.23 was made up in a few seconds by contributions from the representative organizations and private individuals.

Roll call was answered by M. R. Poffenberger, of the Cub Scout Pack; Mrs. W. Doughman, of the Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Geo. Robeson, Friends Community Church; L. P. Chapman, Boy Scouts; A. A. Case, P. T. A.; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Recio, Pals and Gals; Mrs. C. Harvie, Women's Club; Mrs. M. W. Walker, Spring Valley School; Mrs. L. Wigfield, Baptist Church; Mrs. D. H. Key, Girl Scouts and Campfire Girls; and many visitors, representing Casa de Oro Baptist Church, Welfare Group, and others who only wanted to see a council in operatin.

The nominating committee, Mrs. Harvie, Mrs. Wigfield, and Mr. Case, reported their selections for the ballot of incoming officers for the second year of the council. They named Vernon Hibbs, president; Charles Serr, vice president; and Mrs. D. H. Key, secretary. After three calls for further nominations from the floor, none having been made, it was decided to instruct the secretary to cast a unanimous ballot at the next meeting.

Full cooperation and assistance was offered by the present officers to the incoming group.

A Talk With Parents

by L. E. McGee

The theory of self-expression as practised in our schools is one of the least practical I've ever observed. One of my readers came in to the office this week and we discussed the situation briefly.

First, we agreed that the only possible chance for the method to succeed is to have classes of no more than fifteen pupils each and to conduct full time sessions exclusively. The half session plan with 40 or more youngsters per teacher makes it impossible to operate successfully under the self-expresssion theory, even if the method were practical.

Also there are only about 5% of the parents of these children who would be equipped educationally, and mentally, to carry out such an experiment, even if they could be 'sold' on the idea.

Therefore, with one method being used at home, and another being used at school, it appears that our young people will grow up with more emotional complexes than you could shake a stick at if you wish to shake a stick.

Theory is a wonderful thing, because, without it, many of the conveniences which we enjoy, today wouldn't exist. But it seems to me, that the time has come for our schools to admit some obvious truths. With modern methods, we have produced a group of young people, a large percentage of whom are not welcomed into places of business or the homes of their friends. The main reason for this is because too many youngsters have little or practically no respect for anybody, for property, or for authority. They are not equipped for higher education,nor for life.

Perhaps the methods of twenty years ago were harsh and brutal, perhaps our teachers stressed a program of history, reading, arithmetic, and geography, instead of some of the programs carried by our children, BUT we finished a school year with a foundation of educational subjects that prepared us for the next year's work in a higher grade or high school.

I don't even remember having heard the word 'delinquency', and our teachers had no trouble keeping order in their classes.

The most amazing thing about this present method of training school children is the possibility of how it began. The person who originated the plan must be a remarkable individual. Obviously he must have been brought up under the old-fashioned regime. I wonder how he ever survived the rigors of the ordinary school system, and still had enough intelligence to figure out this new modern theory that prepares your boy or girl for life in a world that doesn't exist. I'd like to meet him.

KEEPSAKE

A SHORT-SHORT STORY
By MARY LOUISE CHEATHAM

As Abigail reached into the oven, her little gold wedding band winked back in solitary courage. She smiled, ruefully, taking out the cake that was to celebrate the third anniversary of her marriage to Tim. It was a little trick the ring had—winking in that fashion. She was never quite sure whether it was because of the way it was made—entirely of tiny, gold hearts overlapping—or whether the twinkle was due to a mist of tears that had a way of filming her eyes, now and then, when she looked at it.

"It's just a symbol," Tim had said, "until we can get you the real one. A matching set—with diamonds."

So she had worn the little ring, with fondness and love.

Tim had seemed to mind such things much more than she had—especially at the beginning.

"Don't you see, Tim, it doesn't matter about the ring," she had said, gaily. "While I am still 'Miss Adair' at the office, I won't be able to wear one, anyway, and evenings and weekends at home, I'll feel just as much married in this one as in any platinum and diamond affair you could ever buy!"

So she had worn the little ring, with fondness and love, part time, at first, while she was still a wage earner, and constantly thereafter, when she and Tim decided that, with management, she could be a full-time wife.

"There are some things more important than diamonds," she had told Tim, repeatedly, each time the ring fund had to go into some emergency, "and one of them is Tim, Junior. I'd rather have him than all the diamonds in the world."

And now, mixing the white frosting while Baby Tim slept securely in his crib, Abigail was thankful all over again for the past three years.

It was the unexpected arrival of the diamond keepsake, two months ago, that had revived the subject of the rings. It had all grown out of an emergency—

A cousin of Tim's had been rushed to the hospital for a serious operation . . . the cousin who had been Tim's closest relative and greatest help through all his years of adolescence and young manhood.

They gave what little help they could. And Cousin Linda, with the generosity characteristic of her through all the years, searched for some way to show appreciation. That was how she happened to send the ring.

". . . am sending you a keepsake that belonged to my mother," she wrote. "Get Tim to have it remounted for your anniversary."

It was such a sweet gesture. Abigail awaited the parcel in deep humility and delight.

"You see," she told Tim. "Now I am to have my diamond after all. Isn't it strange the way things happen?"

And when the insured package arrived, she took it to the jeweler herself to discuss the mounting as it seemed now that she was actually to have a diamond, she could scarcely wait a minute longer.

She was always glad, in the following weeks, that she had acted on impulse and gone to the jeweler alone. He examined the stone while she stood, absorbed, gazing over the tray of mountings.

"It isn't a diamond," he said, breaking rudely into her happy study. "Just a good imitation."

Stunned, Abigail considered the situation. Cousin Linda was so sweet—she had sent the ring in good faith, having believed, through the years, that the stone was genuine. She simply couldn't tell her. And Tim, now that they had planned the ring for their anniversary, would feel, somehow, that he had to fit one into the budget.

That was how Abigail and the jeweler entered into the conspiracy. An inexpensive mounting for an imitation diamond. "But make it look as fine as you can," Abigail had told him, on departing. "My husband mustn't know our secret."

Now, on the day when Tim was to stop by and bring the ring home, she smiled ruefully at her lone wedding band that soon would be alone no longer.

She and young Timmy festively awaited Tim's arrival. All sense of guilt at her secret vanished with his jubilant homecoming.

"Well, here it is!" Tim cried, flourishing the jewelry box.

Abigail put on her brightest smile as she opened the box. Astonishment overcame the smile. There, reposing on the velvet lining, she saw, not one ring, but two!

"But Tim, it's a mistake!" she cried. "He gave you the wrong box! This is a set—a matching, diamond set!"

"I'll say it's a mistake," Tim scolded merrily, "keeping a secret from your husband! Did you think you could get away with that, young lady?"

"But, the jeweler—" Abigail began. "But, Cousin Linda's ring—"

"I brought Cousin Linda's ring back just as it was for a keepsake," he said, softly. "You see, Abby, I had some good news right after you took that ring to the jeweler. I had a salary increase. I didn't tell you, because I meant to save it for a while and buy you a circlet to go with the remounted ring. I saw the jeweler, too, right after you did—and he confessed. He didn't want me to put more money into something that wasn't genuine. So these are real, Abby—both of them. Put them on—let's see 'em flash!"

They did flash, and Abby waved her hand regally before her two admiring menfolk. But the little gold band flashed too, as she held it in her palm. And this time it wasn't the carved hearts that made it shine. She placed it, gently, side by side in the old-fashioned box with Cousin Linda's imitation diamond. For suddenly, intuition told her something about the keepsake that Cousin Linda didn't know, a secret that made her closely akin to Cousin Linda's mother. The imitation diamond had been like her first wedding band, a "serve the purpose" ring, to be replaced in future. A brilliance splashed into the box with her two keepsakes, and the smile she gave Tim was rather a rainbow look—sunshine through tears.

Incidents Bring Accidents

by Dr. Frank Weege, D. C.

Driving cars on city streets and on highways has changed from a former enjoyable outing into a burdensome and dangerous occupation. How really serious the problem is, can be realized if we consult the reports of an outstanding automobile club.

A statement, just recently given out, shows that in the State of California in the last five months over 6500 motorists lost their privilege of driving a car, every one being involved in an accident. Beside these drivers, nearly 20,000 people were ordered to show proof that they carry liability insurance because of accidents.

The damage done by those careless drivers amounted to over 19 millions of dollars. This is way out of proportion and must be checked. Checked with different methods as of today.

All laws, rules and regulations, signs, and markings are of little benefit if the motorists do not obey and observe them. No matter how careful some of the drivers may be, what good will come from it if others stubbornly refuse to obey the rules of the road? Automobile accidents can be reduced and must be reduced by the most stringent methods as yet not devised.

If those ruthless individuals and murderous morons of drivers would only do harm to themselves one possibly could say, "serves you right," or "you asked for it!" But in many instances the careful and innocent driver and the occupants of his car are getting the worst of the deal and this is the sad and pitiful part of an automobile accident.

One of those indecent drivers was Chester Dallgreen. He liked to drive fast and reckless with no regard to others. Zigzagging from one traffic lane into another he would pass any car ahead of him. He would get a bang out of crossing an intersection at high speed with the yellow light showing. If the red light was on he would come speeding at you as close as he dared and then he would slam on his brakes. A silly grin on his face would show his satisfaction that he had scared the life out of you.

He had done this for a long time and perfected himself into a dare devil driver. Some of his friends had told him about the great dangers involved, but Chester had laughed it off. "Cowards" he would say, "you don't know how, and that's why you're afraid, but I do."

Just last week the great Chester came to the end of his "knowing how." He was driving to work. Somewhat late in starting from home, he increased his already excessive speed to make up time.

From the side road he was traveling on, he noticed a string of cars coming down the highway. Barely slowing down, he did not make the required stop but turned into the main traffic artery on two wheels. How an accident was avoided is just a mystery. But Chester kept on going with a grin on his face and unconcerned about the near tragedy.

Two miles down the highway he had to cross an intersection. He did not bother to slow down though he saw a car approaching from his right, aiming for the same intersection. The driver of this car was one of Chesters own caliber, reckless and careless he kept on coming.

Both men had made a terrible mistake by expecting the other fellow to stop. And so, with a terrific impact both cars plowed into each other demolishing them beyond recognition. After the noise had died down and every fragment of steel, wood and glass were at ease a sad story was told. Both drivers were dead.

"Serves you right" are bad words to use, where life is destroyed, or are they? Slowing down would have amounted to a loss of thirty seconds to each driver, yet they preferred to lose their lives in order to gain half a minute.

And as to the moral of the story:

When in your car at night or day
To go to work or come from play,
Just make that trip a pleasure.
Use reason here and horse sense there,
And drive your car with skill and care,
It pays to drive in leisure.
Keep calm and cool, don't act a fool,
Drive careful, and observe the rule,
Let safety be your measure.
